Greetings Insider,

Undeniably throughout history, information and resources were closely guarded in order to keep wealth within circles of families which would make it more difficult for others to improve their station in life. However, we have the privilege of living in an age of unprecedented opportunities, access to previously reserved information, and the means to quickly and inexpensively exploit those opportunities. With the innovations in recent years in technology, communications, transportation and access to global capital resources, the doors have been opened for anyone with a proper understanding of how to use those tools to meet the wants of the market to profit beyond their wildest dreams.

In this special report I'm going to remove the mystery and start you on the true path of wealth creation by revealing to you what has been known only by a select few that profit whether the economy is up, down or sideways. You will be amazed at how easy it is to turn your financial situation around once you have the right information and the keys that open the door to unlimited possibilities. You will also discover that the answers to your financial problems have been hidden in plain sight; you simply were not trained to see them. In this report, I'm going to show you some of the simplest steps you can take to massively boost your income immediately and lay the foundation for a lifetime of wealth.

As you read along, please have a pen in your hand and a few sheets of paper by your side. This is because you're about to discover a treasure trove of highly secretive and revolutionary moneymaking ideas and techniques and I'm sure you'll want to take detailed notes as you go along.

The Unseen Hand

In his 488 page book, "The Unseen Hand," Ralph Epperson compiled an enormous collection of data suggesting that secret societies, economic totalitarianism, and communist plots were the orchestrators of major events of the past, the wars, the depressions and the revolutions, planned years in advance in order to effect change that favors the interests of the rich and powerful. Epperson called this collective of international conspirators the "Unseen Hand."

It would be easy to relinquish our personal power and responsibility to an international plot. Doing so would relieve each of us of accountability for our economic situation and give us an excuse to accept our lot in life. Let me remove the veil of mystery because there are forces that do drive the global economic engine, however these forces are not in business suits in a smoke filled room plotting to hold on to power. This massive force that brings wealth to both individuals and nations that are in harmony with it, and equally destroys those that do not adhere to it is called "the Market." Once you understand this force, it makes it easier for you to stem the tide of losses and create profits where others cannot even imagine they exist.

A market is any structure that allows buyers and sellers to exchange any type of goods, services and information. Market participants consist of all the buyers and sellers of a good who influence its price. If you are like most people, you probably feel disconnected from the market, uninfluential in affecting it, and feel you are at the total mercy of the market. Once you truly understand how our economy is designed, you will realize that nothing could be further from the truth. Each of us is a key player in the market and every financial decision we make (spending, saving, investing, etc.) affects the market.

The ascribed value of all assets (stocks, bonds, real estate, gold, goods and services, etc.) is subjective and based upon the whims of the market. The market is driven primarily by two emotions; fear and greed.

During boom times, greed or the prospect of making outrageous sums of money at little risk drives investors to invest, lenders to lend, business owners to expand and consumers to spend recklessly.

Value, therefore, is the result of buying and selling decisions en masse more commonly known as the law of supply and demand. As demand by the market goes up and the supply goes down, the value increases as we saw during the real estate boom. Alternately, as the demand goes down and the supply goes up, the value decreases as we saw with the real estate crash. As a result, wealth increases or decreases when values change. Wealth is therefore passive and transfers from one place to another as valued assets change hands.

The Passing of the Masters

Ninety percent of the world's wealth is currently held by people in North America, Europe, and high-income Asian countries and a mere one percent of adults are estimated to hold forty percent of world wealth. However, we are currently witnessing the greatest transfer of wealth (valued assets) in US history. Our current recession has ignited a mass movement of wealth. Home values dropped from their peak in 2006 by thirty one percent in 2009. In most cases there was a complete loss of equity. 401K values have declined on average by fifty percent, and the US Dollar value continues to decline. Between 2002 and 2008, the US dollar lost forty percent of its value.

The good news is, as stated above, wealth does not disappear. The wealth that left the hands of the average person (equity, retirement accounts, etc.) is hanging in limbo waiting for those with new ways of doing business in the 21st Century to grab it. When the market determines where the new value is, the wealth will follow. *How you position yourself right now will determine whether you continue to lose or the wealth is transferred to you. The investment and business decisions you make right now will dictate where you will be in the transfer of wealth.

Remember that the market is in constant flux and the attitudes of the government, lenders and consumers drive the changes in the market and how you are able to capitalize on opportunities. Pay close attention to changes in each of these areas and be ready to quickly shift or in some cases abandon your strategy. It is also important when considering a new or existing market to exploit that you think global. This will broaden your base of opportunities and prevent you from being limited to dying or less profitable markets.

The New World Order

The end of the Great Depression birthed the last great economic era in US history, and catapulted the US as a world leader in manufacturing, industry and export. As European nations went to war (World War II), American factories began to make war goods to sell to nations like Britain. After the war, most of the rest of the world was in ruins which created a huge opportunity for the American economy to outpace the rest of the world. This unchallenged US trade advantage allowed for the repayment of the war generated deficit. The liberal veteran's educational and housing benefits resulted in increased productivity and a construction boom.

The devastation of much of the developed world coupled with innovations in the industrial age, such as electricity in many homes, assembly line manufacturing, investment in the national highway system, etc.

created the growth of behemoth corporations that monopolized markets both domestically and abroad. Their size meant they could benefit from economies of scale and provided high entry barriers to would be competitors. Money was made slowly and methodically. This was the height of the Industrial Age.

Currently we are in a recession, but a recession is merely one phase of a never ending cycle. This phase will play out and another, very different phase will follow. Since the end of World War II, we have gone to the Atomic/Space Age, then to the Information Age and now we are transitioning into the Age of Innovation.

“The innovation age is defined by user-defined advancements, effortless collaboration and rapid (almost constant) change. The maturing Information Age has resulted in a climate where information has become a commodity and available to everyone for little to no cost. The coming Innovation Age, in contrast, will determine how people utilize all of the information available to them in order to produce new products, services, experiences, etc. This is the point of separation between those organizations that thrive in the new "Age" and those who are left behind. Positioning your organization to adopt and leverage these attributes gets you in the game.” (Paul Williams)

The fall of communism in the late 80's and into the 90's sparked globalization and has led to the emergence of new markets, suppliers, capital investment, etc. around the world. Recent innovations in communications, technology, and transportation have created the ability to capitalize on those global opportunities. These changes now allow individuals to replicate what in the past was only achievable by mega corporations. Wealth in this new era will be acquired faster and more abundantly than ever before.

Washington, Wall Street and Big Business's Dirty Little Secret

The transition from old industries to new ones can be bumpy and sometimes painful, especially for workers who lose their jobs. But the economy cannot progress without the revitalization that engenders job destruction. It may be tempting for politicians to save jobs because no one wants to face the struggles of unemployment which could lead to the loss of an election. But government policies to save jobs almost always fail and they know it. They retard economic progress and ultimately destroy jobs by short-circuiting the vital process of innovation.

In order to succeed, you must immediately abandon nearly everything you ever thought you knew about making money. Success requires the strategic mindset of a forward thinking business owner or investor to see the great opportunity that this economy presents to realign your assets and reposition yourself by letting go of all current liabilities (nonperforming 401k, upside down properties, high interest credit card debt, dead end job, etc.) and focusing on the new opportunities that have been created from the chaos (real estate short sales, foreign ETFs, new business opportunities, etc.). It requires you to constantly analyze your financial position by simply doing the math and finding ways to cut costs and increase income. A strategic mindset focused on effective, efficient opportunity exploitation and minimization of loss is needed to increase your chances of success.

The Secret of the Master Wealth Builder

The secret of the Master Wealth Builder is found in a tried and true formula that I call OP5™. As a matter of fact, during the Great Depression, the Getty and Rockefeller families used it to significantly increase their wealth. This powerful little known formula provides maximum speed and efficiency in creating wealth from scratch. Using this formula, called OP5™, you can start out with not a penny to your name and within a short amount of time and a little hard work be raking in more money than you have seen in your lifetime – despite how poorly everyone else is doing.

Sound too simple to be true? Well, that's because it is... If I simply gave you the formula, the truth is in six months, like 99% of people, you probably would still be in the same situation you are in right now. The reason is, without a solid understanding of the ever changing economic conditions and the consequences flowing from such events, and without the proper mindset to strategically respond and adjust to changing conditions, you will apply the formula ineffectively. The ability to flow with the changes and apply the formula correctly I call STRATEGIC REALIGNMENT.

Are you ready to do what it takes to emerge from your current financial situation and build your golden empire?

That's a question only you can answer... but... if you feel you'd like to explore these and dozens of additional secrets more deeply, feel free to call or email me and ask about our workshops, course, one on one consulting and other programs that reveal powerful wealth building secrets.
